Dear Mr. George:-

I am very glad to get the New York Journal with your article on "The Single Tax Idea in England." It is certainly most encouraging. It looks as though the question would become a political issue sooner in Great Britian than in the United States, and it makes little difference in what part of the world the beginning is made. It will not be sporadic for an increasing number will follow ^{the example} ~~it~~ and one day parties will bow to ^{the Single Tax} ~~it~~ as they have been obliged to bow to other great reforms, which they detested as the Devil is said to detest holy water.

Sincerely yours.

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
