New York, N. Y.

Dear Senor Guitierrez:

I am writing to let you know how much I enjoyed the several little visits we had during our recent trip to Virginia. My only regret was that our party was so divided that we did not share the same motor-coach throughout the trip.

The thoughts you expressed during our several conversations were so parallel to those of Henry George that I felt you might be interested in learning more regarding this American economist. I am therefore taking the liberty of sending you, under separate cover, several of his books for your library, which please accept with my compliments.

I trust these books may be of some help to you in your search for the answer to the enigma confronting not only Colombia and the United States, but also the rest of the world.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Otto K. Dorn
