In Freedom's Shrine

That freedom from a foreign king
   So long ago was won,
Is due unto the leadership
   Of Gen'ral Washington.

In pain and strife of Civil War
   The slaves, at last, were freed,
When Lincoln took his pen in hand,
   And thus it was decreed.

The greatest foe of liberty
   By Henry George made clear,
Consists in widespread poverty
   Prevailing far and near.

And since George found the remedy
   To overcome this shame,
Some day his bust will surely be
   Within the Hall of Fame.
