

In Memory of Joseph Stockman, Director Henry George School of Philadelphia.

A man of right goodwill was he,
And one we'll not forget;
He saw the star that George discerned
As it grows brighter yet.

While Joe had a sense of humor,
He strove for justice too;
That George's Birthplace is a shrine
To him ~~was~~ largely due.

'Twas here he taught what Progress meant,
In spite of pain and sorrow,
And worked to lessen Poverty,
To bring a glad tomorrow.

To this he gave his time and strength,
Because he fullwell knew
The earth God gave to all mankind, -
Not just a chosen few.

When you meet men who never met Joe,
Just Say his faith was strong,
That Natural Rights to LAND AND LIFE
To each man must belong.

Then will the dawn of BROTHERHOOD
Be realized at last,
With thanks to many men like Joe,
Who labored in the past.
