Dear Ed:

Good to talk to you on the phone. I hope you can realize some of your many-sided plans, especially as related to advanced academic education. I do think we need more people in this field.

Also glad to know that you will pursue the idea of articles for Land & Liberty. As Fred said this need not be for every issue, that would lighten your burden a bit.

I took another look at your article on Poverty. Actually it is more of an essay than an article. I really cannot find any fault with it as an essay, which might be part of a book, or even as a pamphlet. But I would have to agree with the editors of Focus that for their purposes it is probably too general. Rather than hacking this well-written essay to fit it to their purposes, it might be better to start afresh with a more topical and shorter article - perhaps one relating to Pennsylvania or Philadelphia.

Enclosed is copy of an article by Jack Kelly for Tempo, a magazine covering Northeastern Pennsylvania (mostly Scranton/Wilkes-Barre). Possibly a good model? The other article from Tempo, enclosed, may be of interest to you.

Hoping to see you soon,

Sincerely,
