Dear Mr. MacKendrick:

I was very glad to get your letter of the 25th and to know that you will do some book reviewing for us.

Unfortunately NATIONALISM, WAR & SOCIETY had been sent out for review. In its place I have sent you Francis Neilson's new novel A STRONG MAN'S HOUSE and a new book by Dr. Holmes. Our book reviews as a rule run from four-hundred to eight-hundred words.

Don't feel under obligation to handle all the books that happen to come to you. You may find some of them are not worth attention from you or The Public.

Thank you also for your offer to try short articles occasionally on a subject suggested by us. I have made a note of it. Meeting you in the same spirit, might I say that if you ever feel that we ought to have an article on a particular subject by some of our writers, please pass the suggestion along and we will certainly consider it.

Yours very truly,

Manager.
