The Single Tax

Vhat It Is and Why We Urge It

BY HENRY GEORGE

I shall briefly state the fundamental prinples of what we who advocate it call the ngle Tax.

We propose to abolish all taxes save one agle tax levied on the value of land, irreective of the value of the improvements or on it.

What we propose is not a tax on real tate, for real estate includes improveents. Nor is it a tax on land, for we old not tax all land, but only land having value irrespective of its improvements, d would tax that in proportion to that lue.

Our plan involves the imposition of no w tax since we already tax land values in ting real estate. To carry it out we have by to abolish all taxes save the tax on il estate, and to abolish all of that which w falls on buildings or improvements, wing only that part of it which now falls the value of the bare land, increasing that so as to take as nearly as may be the whole of economic rent, or what is sometimes styled the "unearned increment of land values."

That the value of the land alone would suffice to provide all needed public revenues —municipal, county, state, and national there is no doubt.

To show briefly why we urge this change, let me treat (1) of its expediency, and (2) of its justice.

From the single tax we may expect these advantages:

1. It would dispense with a whole army of tax gatherers and other officials which present taxes require, and place in the treasury a much larger proportion of what is taken from the people, while by making government simpler and cheaper, it would tend to make it purer. It would get rid of taxes which necessarily promote fraud, perjury, bribery, and corruption, which lead men into temptation, and which tax what the nation can least afford to spare - honesty and conscience. Since land lies out-of-doors and cannot be removed, and its value is the most readily ascertained of all values, the tax to which we would resort can be collected with the minimum of cost and the least strain on public morals.

- 2. It would enormously increase the oduction of wealth—
- (a) By the removal of the burdens that we weigh upon industry and thrift. If e tax houses there will be fewer and poorer puses; if we tax machinery, there will be so machinery; if we tax trade, there will less trade; if we tax capital, there will less capital; if we tax savings, there ill be less savings. All the taxes therere that we should abolish are those that press industry and lessen wealth. But if tax land values there will be no less land.

(b) On the contrary, the taxation of nd values has the effect of making land bre easily available by industry, since it akes it more difficult for owners of valule land which they themselves do not re to use to hold it idle for a larger future While the abolition of taxes on ice. or and the products of labor would free active element of production, the taking land values by taxation would free the ssive element by destroying speculative id values, and preventing the holding out use of land needed for use. If any one I but look around to-day and see the used or but half-used land, the idle labor, unemployed or poorly employed capital, would be the production of wealth were all the forces of production free to engage.

(c) The taxation of the processes and products of labor on one hand, and the insufficient taxation of land values on the other, produce an unjust distribution of wealth which is building up in the hands of a few fortunes more monstrous than the world has ever before seen, while the masses of our people are steadily becoming relatively poorer. These taxes necessarily fall on the poor more heavily than on the rich; by increasing prices, they necessitate a larger capital in all businesses, and consequently give an advantage to large capitals; and they give, and in some cases are designed to give, special advantages and monopolies to combinations and trusts. On the other hand, the insufficient taxation of land values enables men to make large fortunes by land speculation and the increase in ground values-fortunes which do not represent any addition by them to the general wealth of the community, but merely the appropriation by some of what the labor of others creates

This unjust distribution of wealth develops on the one hand a class idle and wasteful because they are too rich, and on the other hand a class idle and wasteful because they are too poor—it deprives men of capiil and opportunities which would make iem more efficient producers. It thus reatly diminishes production.

- (d) The unjust distribution which is ving us the hundred-fold millionaire on le one side and the tramp and pauper on le other, generates thieves, gamblers, and icial parasites of all kinds, and requires rge expenditure of money and energy in atchmen, policemen, courts, prisons, and her means of defense and repression. ndles a greed of gain and a worship of ealth, and produces a bitter struggle for distence which fosters drunkenness, ineases insanity, and causes men whose engies ought to be devoted to honest proiction to spend their time and strength n eating and grabbing from each other. sides the moral loss, all this involves an ormous economic loss which the single
- (e) The taxes we would abolish fallest heavily on the poorer agricultural stricts, and tend to drive population it wealth from them to the great cities, a tax we would increase would destroy it monopoly of land which is the great use of that distribution of population ich is crowding the people too closely ether in some places, and scattering in too far apart in other places. Families live on top of one another in cities because of the enormous speculative prices at which vacant lots are held. In the country they are scattered too far apart for social intercourse and convenience; because, instead of each taking what land he can use, every one who can grabs all he can get, in the hope of profiting by its increase of value, and the next man must pass farther on. Thus we have scores of families living under a single roof, and other families living in dugouts on the prairies afar from neighbors - some living too close to each other for moral, mental, or physical health, and others too far separated for the stimulating and refining influences of society. The wastes in health, in mental vigor, and in unnecessary transportation result in great economic losses which the Single Tax would save.

Let us turn to the moral side and consider the question of justice.

The right of property does not rest on human laws; they have often ignored and violated it. It rests on natural laws—that is to say, the law of God. It is clear and absolute, and every violation of it, whether committed by a man or a nation, is a violation of the command, "Thou shalt not steal." The man who catches a fish, grows n apple, raises a calf, builds a house, nakes a coat, paints a picture, constructs a pachine, has, as to any such thing, an xclusive right of ownership which carries ith it the right to give, to sell or bequeath hat thing.

But who made the earth that any man an claim such ownership of it, or any part f it, or the right to give, sell or bequeath ? Since the earth was not made by us. ut is only a temporary dwelling place on hich one generation of men follow another; ince we find ourselves here, are manifestly ere with equal permission of the Creator, ; is manifest that no one can have any xclusive right of ownership in land, and at the rights of all men to land must be rual and inalienable. There must be an xclusive right of possession of land, for ie man who uses it must have secure posession of land in order to reap the products t his labor. But his right of possession just be limited by the equal right of all, nd should therefore be conditioned on the ayment to the community by the possessor f an equivalent for any special valuable rivilege thus accorded him.

When we tax houses, crops, money, furiture, capital or wealth in any of its forms, e take from individuals what rightfully elongs to them. We violate the right of property, and in the name of the state comnit robbery. But when we tax ground alues we take from individuals what does not belong to them, but belongs to the community, and which cannot be left to adividuals without the robbery of other adividuals.

Think what the value of land is. It has io reference to the cost of production, as as the value of houses, horses, ships, lothes, or other things produced by labor, or land is not produced by man, it was reated by God. The value of land does ot come from the exertion of labor on and, for the value thus produced is a value f improvement. That value attaches to ny piece of land means that that piece of ind is more desirable than the land which ther citizens may obtain, and that they re more willing to pay a premium for perussion to use it. Justice therefore requires at this premium of value shall be taken or the benefit of all in order to secure to Il their equal rights.

Consider the difference between the value f a building and the value of land. The alue of a building, like the value of goods, of anything properly styled wealth, is roduced by individual exertion, and there are properly belongs to the individual; but it is value of land only arises with the growth and improvement of the community, and herefore properly belongs to the communty. It is not because of what its owners . have done, but because of the presence of the whole great population, that land n New York is worth millions an acre. This value therefore is the proper fund or defraying the common expenses of the whole population; and it must be taken for public use, under penalty of generating and speculation and monopoly which will ring about artificial scarcity where the Ireator has provided in abundance for all vhom His providence has called into exisence. It is thus a violation of justice to ax labor, or the things produced by labor, md it is also a violation of justice not to

These are the fundamental reasons for which we urge the Single Tax, believing it to be the greatest and most fundamental of all reforms. We do not think it will change uman nature. That, man can never do; not it will bring about conditions in which uman nature can develop what is best, intead of, as now in so many cases, what is worst. It will permit such an enormous roduction as we can now hardly conceive. It will secure an equitable distribution. It will solve the labor problem and dispel the arkening clouds which are now gathering ax land values.

ver the horizon of our civilization. It will iake undeserved poverty an unknown hing. It will check the soul-destroying reed of gain. It will enable men to be at east as honest, as true, as considerate, and s high-minded as they would like to be. t will remove temptation to lying, false wearing, bribery, and law breaking. It ill open to all, even the poorest, the omforts and refinements and opportunities f an advancing civilization. It will thus. we reverently believe clear the way or the coming of that kingdom of right and istice, and consequently of abundance and eace and happiness, for which the Master old His disciples to pray and work. ot that it is a promising invention or cuning device that we look for the single tax do all this; but it is because it involves conforming of the most important and indamental adjustments of society to the preme law of justice, because it involves ie basing of the most important of our iws on the principle that we should do to

The readers of this article, I may fairly resume, believe, as I believe, that there is world for us beyond this. The limits of it is space has prevented me from putting better them more than some hints for thought et me in conclusion present two more:

thers as we would be done by.

1. What would be the result in Heaven self if those who get there first instituted ivate property in the surface of Heaven, id parceled it out in absolute ownership nong themselves, as we parcel out the rface of the earth?

2. Since we cannot conceive of a Heaven which the equal rights of God's children their father's bounty is denied, as we we deny them on this earth, what is the ity enjoined on Christians by the daily ayer; "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be one, on earth, as it is in Heaven?"

The Spirit of Henry George,

I propose to beg no question, to shrink om no conclusion, but to follow truth herever it may lead. Upon us is the sponsibility of seeking the law, for in the ery heart of our civilization to-day women int and little children moan. But what law may prove to be is not our affair. I the conclusions that we reach run countr to our prejudices, let us not flinch; if ley challenge institutions that have long sen deemed wise and natural, let us not im back.

-Henry George, in "Progress and Poverty."

The Power of Truth.

The truth that I have tried to make ear will not find easy acceptance. If at could be, it would have been ccepted long ago. If that could be, it ould never have been obscured. But will find friends—those who will toil or it; suffer for it; if need be, die for it. his is the power of truth.

-Henry George in "Progress and Poverty."

The Single Taxer finds no fault with the relusive possession of land. It is necestry to the highest civilization now possible, at it is in each case a special privilege for high the beneficiary should pay an annual ental in the form of a tax levied in proportion to its value. In that way only can be inequalities of privilege and opportunity a equalized. In that way only can be cured an equal chance for all.—John B. lowarth.

Those who desire to organize the social fe of mankind on juster foundations will be able to avoid Henry George's plan, at will take it as their basis.—Leo Tolstoy.

When once the philosophy of the Single ax is thoroughly grasped, the world is sen in an entirely new light. The common sperience of Single Taxers is that this ewly revealed provision of nature brings a onception of the world as it might be, and a consequence a new faith in God.—Henry Vare Allen.

Single Tax is making room at the Father's able for all of His children.—Rev. Father IcGlynn.

Is It Worth While?

Is it worth while to put the Land Value Tax to operation in Missouri and Oregon by 1913? it worth while to put the Single Tax into ceration in Rhode Island? Is it worth while try? That is what the Joseph Fels Fund mmission is doing. The Land Value Tax ill be on the ballot in Oregon in 1912. If the ajority of the voters in that State vote "Yes," e Single Tax on Land Values will be establed. We shall see the beginning of the end the present system of taxation by which bor is shut out from opportunity, and by hich the profits of industry flow into the ockets of Special Privilege.

Is it worth while to abolish the tax system at disinherits the majority of your brothers it sisters? If you think it is worth while, will be help? If you have not contributed to the seph Fels Fund of America, will you consibute what you can? If you are a contributor, in and will you increase your subscription? Joseph Fels offered to give $25,000 a year for years to put the Single Tax into effect mewhere in the United States within five ars, on condition that the Single Taxers of the United States within five ars, on condition that the Single Taxers of the United States would contribute an equal nount.

This is as much your cause as the cause of seph Fels. Is it worth while to work for our cause and contribute to it even to the extra tof denying yourself? Joseph Fels is giving more than his $25,000 a year; he is giving mself to this work. He offers to give $50,000 · $100,000 a year, and even more, if the Sinie Taxers of the United States will contribute at amount. Inspired by the example and Ill of the spirit of Henry George, Joseph Fels giving his life to the cause of industrial freedom. Will you help make this a nation-wide ovement? No battle for freedom was ever on without self-denial.
