

Oct. 30, 1990

Dear Mr. Clancy:

I am quite pleased to see that my brief essay on the balance of trade was selected for The Georgist Journal, No. 69. Will you please be kind enough to send me another copy of No. 69, so that I may lend it to my economics professor?

The postmaster was correct in saying there is no 8 Fox Mill Crescent in London. I live at No. 3. Since I do not foresee myself changing address while attending school, please change your record. In the past, some mail from the HGI was sent to No. 3, and some to No. 8. The mailman knows my name, and has knowingly rerouted mail from the HGI to me.

For some reason, not likely the house number, I have not yet received my marked lessons or certificate for completing the Economic Science course. Perhaps it takes Mr. Blansky a few weeks to mark nine lessons. Regardless of why, there has been a delay, I continue to wait patiently.

Sincerely,

Glenn R. Warrington

P.S. The faculty newspaper at UWO printed my letter on tuition and rent unedited - the only letter that week whose author was not a professor or master. The enclosed letter is the work of me and a student editor whose respect for spelling, punctuation, and preservation of the original is less than optimal. The student newspaper is, however, read by thousands. - GRH

4628