Dear William Newcomb:

Thank you for your letter of November 1 with enclosures.

I have looked over your materials, read the works of Henry George, and even attended courses at the Henry George School in New York City. I am afraid, though, that I find single-tax doctrine wholly unpersuasive as a cure for "most of the problems" that beset us.

If that means The Progressive will have to get along without your subscription, I am afraid it can't be helped.

Sincerely,

Erwin Knoll
